Help is at Hand

‘Being a teenager has never been easy, and, from all our research, it seems to be getting more difficult every year.’ So says Janet Faulkner, Director of Child Power UK. Helping Hand, a new service for 13 to 19 year olds, is her brainchild. ‘I realized that there was lots of help at hand for young people in extreme difficulty. They can ring Childline, for example, if they are suffering from bullying or have run away from home, things like that, but nothing for the more everyday problems they face. And so I created Helping Hand to fill the gap’.

The concept is simple. A thirteen-year-old girl is being teased by her older brother. A teenage boy feels embarrassed every time he goes shopping with his mum. Someone is jealous of their best friend because they’ve got a cool new CD player. Who do they turn to? Helping Hand. ‘They are little things, yes,’ says Janet, ‘but all problems need to be sorted out and talked about. And often it’s better to talk to a complete stranger about these things, rather than someone you know really well. We provide a 24-hour free service to do two main things – listen sympathetically, and offer advice where appropriate,’

Helping Hand doesn’t claim to be able to solve every problem. ‘We can’t work miracles,’ says Andrew Carter, a counselor, ‘and we can’t make all problems disappear just like that, but Helping Hand gives kids the chance to express their frustrations and anxieties, and that’s a help in itself. I had a teenager the other day who had just split up with his girlfriend. He didn’t want to talk to anyone in his family about it, and his friends just joked about it when he brought the subject up. He really just needed somebody to listen to him. And that’s what we’re there for.’
